LB 530

factually accurate? Could this language just be a recommendation rather than a mandate?

SENATOR BEUTLER: No, I think it's a mandate, and I don't think the language is inaccurate.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So you think when this bill is passed, the withdrawal is effective or completed? Effective, that's what effective means.

SENATOR BEUTLER: No.

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Time. Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And, Senator Beutler, I don't want to get you in the middle of an argument that wasn't of your making, so I won't continue that...that line of questioning.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Well, it was of my making, Senator, in that that was language that I added in. So don't pick on Senator Dierks, pick on me, if you're concerned about the language.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Beutler, I didn't even mention Senator Dierks, so don't draw him into the discussion now also. (Laugh.) But here is my...here is the point that I'm making, Senator Dierks had said, since Senator Beutler mentioned Senator Dierks and Senator Dierks did speak on it, he's glad his degree is in veterinary medicine. When I was taking Spanish, there was a quotation that existed, it said, shoemaker to thy last, meaning, shoemaker do shoemaker's work. Well, Senator Dierks should practice veterinary medicine, which he does. Senator Beutler is a lawyer, and I'm going to ask him this question now. Senator Beutler, you're saying this is the language that you constructed, or did I misunderstand you?

SENATOR BEUTLER: Yeah, generally speaking. I mean as with much of the language, it's a work with...it's been worked with the Bill Drafter and others interested.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But you were the one who wanted to include the word "effective"?
